EXPLANATION. 1921

353

There are ~~356~~ industry classifications, and each accepted report is assigned to one of these classifications according to the product of chief value.

The classification of reports for manufacturing establishments is the assignment of the individual schedule to the particular class to which it belongs, in order to bring together, so far as practical, all the establishments engaged in the same or kindred industries.

As a general rule the classification will be determined according to the product of chief value. There may be exceptions to this rule, in connection with some industry for which a supplemental schedule is provided, due to the kind and quantity of materials used or the character of the machinery. A minor product or by-product, separately reported, is given its proper classification and tabulated with the products for that industry.
